

SYNOPSIS.

Giles Dudley arrived in San Francisco to join his friend and distant relative Henry Wilton, whom he was to assist in an important and mysterious task, and who accompanied Dudley on the ferry boat trip into the city. The remarkable resemblance of the two men is noted and commented on by passengers on the ferry. They see a man with snake eyes, which sends a thrill through Dudley. Wilton postpones an explanation is noted and commented on by passengers on the ferry. They see a man with snake eyes, which sends a thrill through Dudley. Wilton postpones an explanation of the strange errand Dudley is to perform, but occurrences cause him to know it is one of no ordinary meaning. Wilton leaves Glies in their room, with instruction to await his return and shoot any one who tries to enter. Outside there is heard shouts and curses and the noise of a quarrel. Henry rushes in and at his request the roommates quickly exchange clothes, and be hurries out again. Hardly has he gone than Glies is startled by a cry of "Help," and he runs out to find some one being assaulted by a half dezen men. He summons a policeman but they are unable to find any trace of a crime. Glies returns to his room and hunts for some evidence that neight explain his strange mission. He finds a map which he endeavors to decipher. Dudley is summoned to the morgae and there finds the dead body of his friend, itemy Wilton. And thus Wilton dies without ever explaining to Dudley the puzzling work he was to perform in San Francisco. In order to discover the secret mission his friend had entrusted to him Dudley continues his disguise and permits himself to be known as Henry Wilton. Dudley, mistaken for Wilton, is employed by Knapp to assist in a stock brotherage deat, "Dicks" takes the supposed Wilton to Mother Porton's Mother Borton discovers that he is not Wilton. The lights are turned out and a free for all fight follows. Glies Dudley finds himself closeted in a room with Mother Borton who makes a confident of lim.

CHAPTER VII. (Continued.) "My name is Dudley-Giles Dudley."

"Where is Wilton?"

"Dead."

"Dead? Did you kill him?" The half-kindly look disappeared from her eyes and the hard lines settled into an expression of malevolent repulsive-

"He was my best friend," I said sadly; and then I described the leading events of the tragedy I had witnessed.

The old woman listened closely, and with hardly the movement of a muscle, to the tale I told. "And you think he left his job to you?" she said with a sucer.

"I have taken it up as well as I can. To be frank with you, Mrs. Borton, I know nothing about his job. I'm going along on blind chance, and trying to keep a whole skin."

The old woman looked at me in amazement.

"Poor boy!" she exclaimed halfpityingly, half-admiringly, "You put your hands to a job yea know nothing about, when Henry Wilton couldn't carry it with all his wits about him."

"I didn't do it," said I sullenly. "It has done itself. Everybody insists that I'm Wilton. If I'm to have my throat slit for him I might as well try to do his work. I wish to Heaven I knew what it was, though."

Mother Borton leaned her head on her hand, and gazed on me thoughtfully for a full minute.

"Young man," said she impressively, "take my advice. There's a train for the East in the mornin'. Just git on board, and never you stop short of

"I'm not running away," said I bitterly. "I've got a score to settle with the man who killed Henry Wilton. When that score is settled, I'll go to Chicago or anywhere else. Until that's done, I stay where I can settle it."

Mother Borton caught up the candle and moved it back and forth before my face. In her eyes there was a gleam of savage pleasure.

"By God, he's in carnest!" she said to herself, with a strange laugh. "Tell me again of the man you saw in the

1 described Doddridge Knapp,

"And you are going to get even with him? she said with a chuckle that had no mirth in it.

"Yes," said I shortly,

"Why, if you should touch him the people of the city would tear you to

"I shall not touch him. I'm no assassin!" I exclaimed indignantly, "The law shall take him, and I'll see him ering candle. hanged as high as Haman."

Mother Borton gave a low, gurgling

"The law! oh, my liver-the law! How young you are, my boy! Oh, ho, oh ho!" And again she absorbed her mirthless laugh, and gave me an evil grin. Then she became grave again, and laid a claw on my sleeve. "Take my advice now, and git on the train." "Not I!" I returned stoutly.

"I'm doing it for your own good," she said, with as near an approach to a coaxing tone as she could command. It was long since she had used her voice for such a purpose and it grated. "For my sake I'd like to see you go on and wipe out the whole raft of 'em. But I know what'll happen to ye, honey. I've took a fancy to ye. I don't know why. But there's a look on your face that earries me back for forty years, and-don't try it, dearle." There were actually tears in the creature's eyes, and her hard, wicked face softened, and became almost tender and womanly, "I can't give up," I said. "The work Is put on me. But can't you help me? I believe you want to. I trust you. Tell me what to do-where I stand. I'm all in the dark, but I must do my

"You're right," she said. "I'm an old fool, and you've got the real sand. You're the first one except Henry Wilton that's trusted me in forty years, and you won't be sorry for it, my boy. You owe me one, now. Where would you have been to-night if I hadn't had the light doused on ye?"

It was the best appeal I could have

"Oh, that was your doing, was it? I thought my time had come.

"Oh, I was sure you'd know what to do. It was your best chance," "Then will you help me now?"

The old crone considered, and her face grew sharp and cunning in Its

"What can I do?"

"Tell me, in God's name, where I stand. What is this dreadful mystery? Who is this boy? Why is he hidden and why do these people want to know where he is? Who is behind me and who threatens me with death?"

I burst out with these question passionately, almost frantically. This was from the first time I had had chance to demand them of another human being. Mother Borton gave me a leer.

"I wish I could tell you, my dear, but I don't know."

"You mean you dare not tell me," I said boldly. "You have done me a "Well, I'd better be going then," great service, but If I am to save my-said I at last. "It's nearly 4 o'clock, denly in wild-eyed alarm. 'S-s-h!" she whispered.

name no names. "And is this all you know?" I asked n disappointment. Mother Borton tried to remember some other point. "I don't see how it's going to keep a knife from between my ribs," I complained.

"You keep out of the way of Tom Terrill and his hounds, and you'll be all right, I reckon."

"Am I supposed to be the head man in this business?"

"Yes." 'Who are my men?" "There's Wilson and Fitzhugh and Porter and Brown," and she named ten or a dozen more. "And what is Dicky?"

finger on Dicky Nahl," said Mother Borton spitefully.

'Nahl is his name?"

"Yes. And I've seen him hobnob with Henry Wilton, and I've seen him thick as thieves with Tom Terrill, and which he's thickest with the devil might befall. himself coaldn't tell. I call him Slippery Dicky."

"Why did he bring me here tonight?"

"I hearn there's orders come to change the place-the boy's place, you know. You was to tell 'em where the new one was to be, I reckon, but Tom Terrill spoiled things. He's lightning, is Tom Terrill. But I guess he got it all out of Dicky, though where Dicky got it the Lord only knows."

This was all that was to be had Mother Borton. Either she knew no more, or she was sharp enough to hide a knowledge that might be dangerous, even fatal, to reveal. She was willing to serve me, and I was forced to let it pass that she knew no more.

MOVED THE GANDLE BACK AND FOOTH BEFORE

me I must know more. Can't you see that?"

"Yes," she nodded. "You're in a hard row of stumps, young man."

"And you can help me." "Well, I will," she said, suddenly softening again. "I took a shine to you when you came in an' I says to myself, 'I'll save that young fellow,' an' I done it. And I'll do more. Mr Wilton was a fine gentleman, an' I'd do something, If I could, to get even with those murderin' gutter-pickers that laid him out on a slab."

She besitated and looked around at the shadows thrown by the flick-

"Well?" I said impatiently, "Who is the boy, and where is he?" "Never you mind that young, fel low. Let me tell you what I know. Then maybe we'll have time to go into things I don't know." It was of no use to urge her. bowed my assent to her terms.

"I'll name no names," she said. 'My threat can be cut as quick as yours, and maybe quicker." "The ones that has the boy means all right. They're rich. The ones as is looking for the boy is all wrong. They'll be rich if they gits him."

"Why, I don't know," sald Mother Borton. "I'm tellin' you what Henry in unless he comes from inside the Wilton told me."

suspect that she knew nothing after "Do you know where he is?" I asked, taking the questioning into my own hands. "No"-sullenly.

"Who is protecting him?" "I don't know." "Who is trying to get him?"

"Its that snake-eyed Tom Terrill that's leading the hunt, along with Darby Meeser; but they ain't doing it for themselves."

"Is Doddridge Knapp behind them?" ing I left the candle to burn to the aid.

self from the dangers that surround | and everything seems to be quiet hereabouts. I'll find my way to my room.

MY FACE

"You'll do no such thing," said Mother Borton, "They've not given up the chase yet. Your men have gone home, I reckon, but I'll bet the saloon that you'd have a surprise before you got to the corner."

"Not a pleasant prospect," said I grimly. "No. You must stay here. The room next to this one is just the thing for you. See?" She drew me into the adjoining com, shading the candle as we passed through the had that no gleam might fall where it would attract attention. You'll be safe here," she said. Now do as I say. Go to sleep and git ome rest. You ain't bad much, I

The room was cheerless, but in the circumstances the advice appeared for the same through which I had felt good. I was probably safer here than my way in the darkness of the night. in the street, and I needed the rest.

"Good night," said my strange proyou git ready. This is a beautiful chamber, though we don't get no sun to bother your eyes in the mornoutside. So there can't nobody git to the saloon, and that it was open. house. There, git to bed. Look out This was maddening. I began to you don't set fire to nothing. And put out the candle. Now good night, deprie."

socket, and watch d the flickering shadows chase each other over walls and ceiling, flually dropping off to

CHAPTER VIII.

In Which I Meet a Few Surprises. I awoke with the sense of threatened danger strong in my mind. For a moment I was unable to recall where was, or on what errand I had come. Then memory returned in a flood, and I sprang from the bed and peered about me.

A dim light struggled in from the darkened window, but no cause for apprehension could be seen. I was the only creature that breathed the air of that bleak and dingy room.

I drew aside the curtain, and threw up the window. It opened merely on a light-well, and the blank walls be-"It's a smart man as can put his youd gave back the cheery reflection of a patch of sunshine that fell at an angle from above.

The fresher air that crept in from the window cleared my mind, a dash of water refreshed my body and I was ready once more to face whatever

I looked at my watch. It was 8 o'clock, and I had slept four hours in this place. Truly I had been imprudent after my adventure below, but I had been right in trusting Mother Borton. Then I began to realize that I was outrageously hungry, and I remembered that I should be at the office by 9 to receive the commands of Doddridge Knapp, should be choose to send them.

I threw back the bolt, but when I tried to swing the door open it resisted my efforts. The key had been missing when I closed it, but a sliding bolt had fastened it securely. Now I saw that the door was locked.

Here was a strange perdicarcent. I had heard nothing of the noise of the key before I lost myself in slumber. Mother Borton must have turned it as an additional precaution as I slept. But how was I to get out? I hesitated to make a poise that could attract attention. It might bring some one less kindly disposed than my hostess of the night. But there was no other way. I was trapped, and must take the risk of summoning assistance.

I rapped on the panel and listened. No sound rewarded me. I rapped again more vigorously, but only stlence followed. The house might have been the grave for all the signs of life it gave back.

There was something ominous about To be locked, thus, in a dark room of this house in which I had already been attacked, was enough to shake my spirit and resolution for the moment. What lay without the door, my apprehension asked me. Was It part of the plot to get the secret it was supposed I held? Had Mother Borton been murdered and the house seized? Or had Mother Borton played me false and was I now a prisoner to my own party for my enforced imposture. as one who knew too much to be left at large and too little to be of use? On a second and calmer thought it was evidently folly to bring my failers about my ears, if Jailers there were I abandoned my half-formed plan of breaking down the door, and turned to the window and the light-well. Another window faced on the same space, not five feet away. If it were but one ned I might swing myself over and through it: but it was closed a curtain hid the unknown possibilities and dangers of the interior. A dezen feet above was the roof, with no projection or foothold by wihch it might be reached. Below, the lightwell ended in a tinned floor, about four feet from the window sill. I swung myself down, and with two steps was trying the other window. It Engine was unlocked. I raised the sash cau-tiously, but its creaking protest Skids seemed to my excited ears to be load. enough to wake any but the dead. I stopped and listened after each squeak of the frame. There was no sign of

Then I pushed aside the curtain cantiously, and looked within. The room appeared absolutely bare. Gaining confidence at the sight, I threw the curtain farther back, and with a bound climed in, revolver in hand.

The room was, as I had thought, bare and deserted. There was a musty smell about it, as though it had not been opened for a long time, and dust and desolation lay heavy upon it.

There was, however, nothing here to linger for, and I hastened to try the door. It was locked. I stooped to examine the fastening. It was of the cheapest kind, attached to door and casement by small screws. With a good wrench it gave way, and I found guess, since you got to San Fran- myself in a dark side-hall between two rooms. Three steps brought me to the main hall, and I recognized it

I took my steps cautionsly down the stairs, following the way that led to tectress. "You needn't git up till the side entrance. The saloon and restaurane room I was anxious to room-beautiful. I call it our bridal evade, for there would doubtless be a barkeeper and several lolterers about, brides down here. There won't be no It could not be avoided, however. As I neared-the bottom of the stairs I in', for that window don't open up saw that a door led from the hallway (TO BE CONTINUED.)

> Smoking Soldiers. The experience of Lord Wolseley

of the British army has been such Mother Borton closed the door be- that he has always made it a rule to hind her, and left me to the shadows, allow, whenever possible, the sol-There was nothing to be gained by diers under his command one pound sitting up, and the candle was past its of tobacco a month, which he considfinal inch. I felt that I could not ers a fair allowance, and with the use sleep, but I would lie down on the bed of which he finds the soldier does his and rest my fired limbs, that I might best work. In Italy the military aurefresh myself for the demands of the thorities recognize tobacco as one of day. I kicked off my boots, put my the comforts essential to troops and revolver under my hand and lay down. cigars are served out to them with Heedless of Mother Borton's warn- their fally rations.-Washington Her

What is Pe-ru-na?

Is it a Catarrh Remedy, or a Tonic, or is it Both?

Some people call Peruna a great tonic. Others refer to Peruna as a great catarrh remedy.

Which of these people are right? Is it more proper to call Peruna a catarrh remedy than to call it a tonic?

Our reply is, that Peruna is both a tonic and a catarrh remedy. Indeed, there can be no effectual catarrh remedy that is not also a tonic.

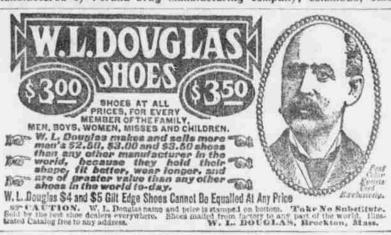

In order to thoroughly relieve any case of catarrh, a remedy must not only have a specific action on the mucous membranes affected by the catarrh, but it must have a general tonic action on the nervous system.

Catarrh, even in persons who are otherwise strong, is a weakened condition of some mucous membrane. There must be something to strengthen the circulation, to give tone to the arteries, and to raise the vital forces.

Perhaps no vegetable remedy in the world has attracted so much attention from medical writers as HYDRASTIS CANADENSIS. The wonderful efficacy of this herb has been recognized many years, and is growing in its hold upon the medical profession. When joined with CUBEBS and COPAIBA a trie of medical agents is formed in Peruna which constitutes a specific remedy for catarrh that in the present state of medical progress cannot be improved upon. This action, reinforced by such renowned tonics as COLLIM-SONIA CANADENSIS, CORYDALIS FORMOSA and CEDRON SEED, ought to make this compound an ideal remedy for estarrh in all its stages and locations

From a theoretical standpoint, therefore, Peruna is beyond criticism. The use of Peruna, confirms this opinion. Numberless testimonials from every quarter of the earth furnish ample evidence that this judgment is not over enthusiastic. When practical experience confirms a well-grounded theory the result is a truth that cannot be shaken.

Manufactured by Peruna Drug Manufacturing Company, Columbus, Ohio.

Cheapness vs. Quality

In the matter of food you can't afford to sacrifice Quality for Cheapness. Economy is right and good but inferior food products are dear at any price.

is economical—not Cheap. Try it. The best at any price or your money back. JAQUES MFG. CO. Chicago.

Our new factory is the most complete and up-

That is why we can give you a durable, aimple, atrong, highest-grade, perfect-working, long-lived engine at a low price.

This liberal proposition is the crowning reason to pot a lot of good common sense ones, why you should buy an Olds Engine and none other.

We Have Any Kind of an

Engine You Want

Granew catalogus et al about them in detail I especially want to call your attention to our Hopper Jacket Engine on skids or wheels, 3 to rah, p., which is ready to run when you get it. Fill it with gasoline, throw on the switch, turn the wheel—that's all. No piping to connect, nothing to set up, always ready, can be moved

Our new catalogus tells about them in detail.

SENGINES I WANT YOU TO GET the most liberal proposition ever made on a gasoline engine. It will save you money. When a company like this, the oldest and biggest exclusive gasoline engine manufacturers in the country, make such a proposition, it means something. I have placed my pro-position in the hands of our representatives. Write to them or to me, and you will receive it by return mail. JAS. B. SEAGER, Gen. Mgr. Olds Power Cu. The Olds Engine is the best and cheapest Engine you can buy. It is the simplest in construction most economical to run, will do your work at the smallest expense, and does not get out of order. This company has been making engines—and nothing else—for thirty years. We are start winter and summer. The U. S. Government uses them.

Don't Fail to Write

for our new catalogue and the liberal proposi-tion at once. Address the home office or any Do not buy any other engine until you have got my liberal proposition. It is something un-usual. You certainly want to know about it.

OLDS GAS POWER CO. Home Office, 966 Seager St., Lansing, Mich. Boston, 69-75 Washington St., N.

Kantas City, 1235 W. Elevento St. Omahs, 1024 Fermin St. Binghamton, N. Y., 23 Wanbington St. Mineapoile, 313 S. Third St. Fortland. Ore, 80 Seventh St. Eigin, 10, 26-34 River St. Kempton, Pa. Hounton, Tex., 511 Travis St. Narfolk Va. Norfolk, Va. Miami, Fia., Cand Thirteenth St. Philadelphia, 1816 Market St. To incute prompt deliveries, we carry a full line of Engines and parts with our representatives.

One trial will convince Sloan's will relieve soreness and stiffness quicker and easier than any other preparation sold for that purpose. It penetrates to the bone. quickens the blood, drives away fatigue and gives strength and elasticity to the muscles. Thousands use Sloan's Liniment for rheumatism, neuralgia, toothache sprains, contracted muscles, stiff joints; cuts, bruises, burns, cramp or colic and insect stings. PRICE 254,50¢, 6$1.00 Dr. Earl S. Sloan, Boston, Mass. U.S.A.